Hello Doug - what a nice surprise ! I was thinking about you the other day hoping life is treating you well.

In fact, I am up here in your old stomping grounds in MT. We have a removal going on the Carpenter Snow Ck site and hoping to get out before winter.

As for the Silverton project, it's a funny place, and seems to cause funny behavior within our organization. Hopefully we'll do some good with the work you read about.

Thanks for the kind words, and hope to see you sometime in the winter months when I'm home again.

Best wishes,
Steve

Hi Steve -

I just read about EPA's proposed acid mine drainage mitigation work near Silverton in this morning's Denver Post. How refreshing to read something positive about the Agency, especially when it relates to the kind of work I think the Agency does best and when the project will be directed by one of the Agency's best! I will always remember your impressive work at the Alberton MT train derailment site and more specifically how you personally reversed both the state's and local's perceptions regarding the EPA's Superfund program from one of skepticism, distrust and negativity to one of full acceptance and resounding support. Take it from someone who spent three years in the Montana EPA Office working on the remedial program, that was truly an exceptional accomplishment! I betting on similar results in the Silverton area. Continues success. Hope all is well.

Doug
